Maryland smoking ban may affect SSU residence halls

Kate Spinner
Flyer Staff Writer

On March 27, 1995, legislation was approved to ban smoking in all public buildings and places of employment. The legislation is imposed under state occupational and safety regulations and will be enforced by inspectors for the state commissioner of labor and industry.

The new law bans smoking in factories, retail stores, shopping malls, warehouses, office buildings, movie theaters, schools, colleges, prisons, state buildings, private clubs and company vehicles with more than one occupant.

The General Assembly approved a bill that exempts hotels, motels, tobacco shops, smoking research labs and businesses with a liquor license. Smoking is still allowed in certain restaurants that provide a separate, enclosed room for smokers.

Employers must designate smoking rooms with separate ventilation systems if they continue to allow employees to smoke inside. Employees cannot be fined for smoking, but employers can be fined up to $7,000 for each smoking violation.

SSU residence halls may be affected by the new legislation. "At this point, we don't have a clear interpretation of the law," said Kathleen Groutt. "We are holding action to see if campuses are exempt." The law exempts private housing, but university residence halls are state property.

Information about general smoking ban information obtained from:

1995, March 26, 27. The Daily Times, Salisbury, pp. A1-2.

"At this point, we don't have a clear interpretation of the law," said Kathleen Groutt. "We are holding action to see if campuses are exempt."

Untap the keg law, put common sense on draft

STUDENT SURVEY SAYS:
KEG LAW MAKES NO SENSE

Steve Stakem
Flyer Staff Writer

According to the student handbook, the Salisbury State University alcohol policy "prohibits the illegal use, possession or consumption of alcohol by any member of the University community under the age of 21."

In addition to the state law that you must be over the age of 21 to consume alcohol, a state keg registration law went into effect Oct. 1 last year. This law requires that all keg beer purchases be registered to both the buyer and the seller and is part of an effort by Wicomico County to stop underage drinking. Huge fines and penalties are assessed to a keg purchaser caught contributing to the delinquency of minors.

Since the inauguration of this law, kegs are all but extinct from student parties and show no signs of making a comeback. However, it hasn't done anything to stop minors from getting drunk, according to a recent poll of SSU students.

About 150 students, most of who are under 21, were asked a number of questions concerning the consumption of alcohol. The results are not very surprising.

A little less than 10 percent of those surveyed said that they didn't drink at all, and as for those that do, the amount and frequency seem to vary.

Ninety percent of those surveyed said that they drink at least once a week. More than one third consume alcohol at least four times a week, while about 15 percent said they like to drink between five and seven

Lawmaker seeks to regulate "Dark Side" of the Internet

By Marco Buscaglia
College Press Service

WASHINGTON—

Most computer users like the anonymity of the Internet and other online services. They can read things they would never consider flipping through on the bus and can have conversations about topics they would never discuss in public.

At times, however, those messages can convey strong feelings of hatred, or even threats to others. And the person receiving the message may never know if their cyber stalker is sitting at a computer somewhere across the ocean or just down the block.

"There's a dark side to the bright flicker of the computer screen," said Sen. Jim Exon, (D-Neb.). "The explosion of technology also threatens an explosion of misuse."

To help combat that misuse, Exon has proposed the Communications Decency Act of 1995 (Senate Bill 314) to update federal communication laws. If passed, the bill would toughen penalties for anyone who "transmits or otherwise makes available obscene, lewd, lascivious, filthy or indecent" material with the intention to "annoy, abuse, threaten or harass" another person. If found guilty, offenders could face fines up to $100,000.

In addition, Exon said service providers should be held responsible for inflammatory messages posted on their service and would be fined severely if found in violation of the law.

"I want to keep the information superhighway from resembling a red-light district," said Exon. Others, however, say the senator from Nebraska is attempting to censor millions of computer users across the nation.

"Holding the service provider liable for the actions of users is like holding the CEO of Pacific Bell responsible for the actions of someone who makes obscene phone calls," said Eric Tachibana, online service coordinator for the Electronic Frontier Foundation. "It's functionally censorship because service providers will not allow any conversations or bulletin boards which are remotely dangerous for them."

The Electronic Frontier Foundation is being joined by the American Civil Liberties Union, the Center for Democracy and Technology and the Computer Professionals for Social Responsibility in its fight against the proposal.

"A systems operator would have to close off anything that even looked like it was risky," said Tachibana. "You'll end up reading bland, boring conversations."

Mike Kangior, a spokesperson for Exon, said the proposed law would help protect children and other vulnerable computer users. "There are people out there who mask their identity in order to gain communications with children," said Kangior. "They lure them in and could end up putting them in danger. We need legislation to look out for those kids."

Tachibana disagrees, adding that laws against child pornography, harassment and other potential computer crimes are already on the books. "In the process of updating laws, we

The Bill Armany Follies

The former president of United Way of America, William Armany, was found guilty on an array of charges ranging from conspiracy and money laundering to using the company's money to take teenage girls on lavish dates. The Alexandria jury, which rendered the verdict, found the evidence against Armany overwhelming.

Armany spent as much as $400,000 a month on various trips around the globe.

On many occasions, he took a date with him including the time he traveled to Egypt and cruised the Nile with a seventeen year-old. Armany was also found guilty of using the company's money to buy cars and on gambling. To avoid any suspicion, Armany conspired with two other executives in the company to alter the company's accounting book so it would seem as though he were using the company's money for legal activities.

Armany was finally indicted after a two and a half year long investigation by the FBI. The indictment came as a shock to United, which acts as a multi-dollar powerhouse for various charities. Armany will be sentenced on June 14 and can get as many as 10 years in jail and a $100,000 fine.

Twice As Hard

Japan was dealt another shock this week when its police chief of the Armed Forces was allegedly shot four times in the chest by a member of the Aum Supreme Truth cult who drove by on motorcycle. The chief, who held a position roughly the same as the director of the FBI, was spearheading an investigation against Aum Supreme Truth. The Japanese police claim the organization was responsible for spreading a lethal gas know as Sarin in Tokyo's subway system about a month ago.

In recent days, the police has raided a number of the cult's sites and unearthed a sizable stock of different chemicals that they say were used by the cult to produce Sarin. In response to the allegations, Asahara, the spiritual leaders of the cult, broadcasted a televised statement in which he declared that the chemicals were used to produce fertilizers and to make pottery.

Until these two incidents, Tokyo was considered the safest large city in the times a week. This goes to show that some students prefer getting intoxicated rather than studying.

When students drink, the average number of beers they consume is between four and six, with weekend averages tending to be higher. Thirty-eight students confirmed they try to drink at least 10 beers or more on Friday and Saturday.

Males tend to drink more alcohol during drinking sessions than do females. This should not undermine the female desire to kick back with some beer, since almost 30 percent of the students claiming they try to drink at least 10 beers on a weekend session were female.

People's favorite day of the week for drinking is Saturday.

A report from SSU Public Safety shows that during the Fall 1994 semester there were 26 alcohol violations committed, down one from the total reported for the entire 1993-94 academic year. The reason for this drastic increase in half the time is because now the violations are reported for the number of people involved in a violation at a particular campus location, instead of just the place of the incident.

For example, when John Doe gets busted in his room in Chesapeake Hall, so does everyone else there who is involved.

When asked about the keg registration law and whether or not they felt it kept minors from getting drunk at parties,

100 percent responded "No."

One student said, "All the law did was make it an inconvenience to drink from kegs."

Another student added that "[the law] is a lame attempt to slow underage drinking. [Minors] are going to get a hold of the stuff anyway." She went on to compare the "stupidity" of the keg law to the current marijuana laws saying, "they may make it a little harder to get pot, but people are gonna smoke it anyway."

"According to [the law's] logic, one should have to register all beer purchases of more than three and three quarter cases, and we know that doesn't make a damn bit of sense."

Three and three quarter cases is the estimate of beer contained in one quarter keg. SSU students used to get half kegs on a regular basis, which contain almost seven and a half cases of beer.

The question then becomes, if people over the age of 21 have to register keg purchases, which contain three or more cases of beer, then why don't they have to go through the same red tape when they purchase cans or bottles at more than three cases at a time?

Are SSU minors continuing to drink despite the efforts of administrators and county and state boards and commissions? Have the efforts of these political schemes done anything to curb underage drinking? Is there more style to the keg registration law than substance, or is there not much of either?

have to look at the overall picture," Tachibana said. "We can't make some people responsible for the actions of others." On several college campuses, students have discovered there are limits to what they can post on the Internet. In fact, two recent cases involving college students could help further define regulations for the global computer network.

Earlier this year, Jake Baker, a sophomore at the University of Michigan, was suspended from school and arrested after he used the name of a UM student in a graphic story involving rape, torture and murder that he wrote and posted on the Internet.

Baker, who, after 30 days in prison, was recently released on bail, is being charged with making an interstate transmission of a threat to injure another person.

Baker's lawyers contend his arrest violated his right to free speech. But if found guilty, Baker could face up to five years in prison.

Meanwhile, Daniel Bernstein, a graduate student at the University of California-Berkeley is involved in a legal battle with the U.S. State Department over whether he has the right to use an electronic code that could be used to scramble computerized information on the Internet. The State Department has said that since the code could be used to transmit dangerous information, the only provider of such codes should be the federal government.

Bernstein said the ban interferes with his research and is a form of censorship by the federal government.

Contract With America Jeopardizes Student Financial Aid

Thinking about grad school? Do you have younger brothers and sisters preparing to attend college? Do you care about maintaining an educated society and providing educational opportunities to everyone regardless of their family tax bracket?

If the answer to any of these questions is yes, then I urge you to pay attention to what is happening on Capitol Hill. As we speak, Congress is proposing cuts to student aid of between 67 million (in the Senate, yet to be voted on) and 289 million dollars (in the House, already passed) as part of their 1995 Rescission Bill to cut appropriated money for the remainder of this fiscal year. The cuts include the in-school interest subsidy program available on student loans such as the Stafford. This means that interest payments would begin to accrue while a student is still in school. The net effect of this could be an additional expense of $5,000 $6,000 on average for undergraduates and up to $35,000 additional interest charges for graduate students.

The new congressional leadership is earmarking the interest subsidies to save an estimated 12 billion over five years and aid in the quest to balance the Federal budget deficit. Additional cuts are targeted at Graduate fellowship programs such as the Javits and Harris fellowships.

What is the rationale behind these cuts, and where will the money go? Congressman Bill McKeon (R-Ca) holds a typical viewpoint of the bill proponents. He believes these cuts, which will add $21 per month on average to loan repayment costs, are more than offset for individuals who will be earning more as a result of their education.

Actually, student loan repayment obligations consume a disproportionate amount of earnings of those who have earned doctoral or professional school degrees. Between 1985 and 1991, average net income of those who borrowed as graduate students increased by just 59% ($29,566). During that same period average annual loan repayments increased by 154%. In 1985, 9.41 % of net income of those who borrowed as graduate students went to student loan repayments. In 1991, the figure was 18.72%. Loss of the interest exemption would result in an almost 10% increase in total debt for a student borrowing the maximum amount over four years. This could translate into a payment increase by as much as $339 per month.

In reality, what these cuts represent is a transfer of wealth from our nations students who are just starting their careers, and more importantly tax paying lives, to establishment banks which would directly reap the benefits of more interest earnings on future student loans. In addition the pending legislation threatens the future availability of the two-year old Federal Direct Student Loan program which was piloted right here at SSU, and has been successful in reducing lending costs and paperwork by cutting out the middlemen. (Needless to say the lobbying backlash from the middlemen has been significant and may be influencing these proposals.)

Today's and tomorrow's students, graduate and undergraduate, are essential to providing an educated citizenry, a skilled workforce, and continued economic prosperity to our country. Eliminating interest subsidies will simultaneously eliminate the opportunity for countless students to obtain or continue higher education. Such a devastating blow to education will surely lead our country towards a less competitive position in the world marketplace.

If there was ever a time to speak out to your elected representatives, now is that time.

'Animals are Expendable'

In response to Holly Bowers response to my letter published in The Flyer a few weeks ago, I have a few more comments for those still confused about "animal rights."

First, Ms. Bowers, yes I did have a pet cat up until about three weeks ago. Unfortunately, though, my cat was hit by a car. Do you know why? He was struck because he was a dumb cat. Sure I do miss him, and I loved the cat very much, but that doesn't eliminate the fact that he was stupid. He met his demise because he failed to comprehend the potential dangers of and execution of the task of crossing the street. I guess that is why God gave cats "9 lives." One would figure that by their third or fourth life that a cat would learn how to live right, but no, they are just too stupid.

I'm sure by now most of you are pretty upset by my "heartless" comments, but let me reassure your bleeding hearts by saying that my cat, Ditto, never lacked for love, attention, or care. In fact, on many a cold night, Ditto spent the night at the foot of my bed, and never did he go hungry. Additionally, I spent more money on the health care of that cat in the year and a half that I had him than I have spent on myself, ever. Thank you.

In the future, Ms. Bowers, I do plan on getting another pet, and I also plan to give it the same special care that I gave to Ditto. Pets are great companions, but they are still stupid. That is why we, as owners, must take care of them.

Back to the animal rights thing for a moment. There are two topics that I want to cover here: dissection and animal testing. First, let me assure you that the animals used in dissection are not drowned in burlap bags, they are killed in more humane ways, such as electrocution and having their necks slit. Believe me, they never know what hit them. Second, would you rather have a surgeon operate on you that was trained by way of dissection, or one that was trained on a computer simulation of the same? I prefer the former. Third, as horrifying as it may seem, animal testing is necessary. If we can't test new drugs and medical procedures on animals, who or what are we going to use? It just is not prudent to test on humans in the early stages of development, and computer models don't work in this area. Animals are expendable that is why they are used. Think about this for a moment, Holly. Many of the cosmetics that adorn your face were probably tested on animals. Imagine that, someone like you benefitting at the expense of those poor, little animals.

Now it is time to get pro-active. Since drafting my first letter, I have decided to open a new chapter of PETA here at SSU. No, this won't be your regular chapter. My PETA stands for: People for the Eating of Tasty Animals. The first item on my plate (pun intended) as the charter member of this chapter, is to petition the dining facilities to ensure that plenty of meat is served, especially "Flipper" sandwiches and "Bambi" steaks. It makes my mouth water just thinking about it! Any interested parties should contact me.

In conclusion, Holly, next time that you disagree with someone's ideas, you should attack the ideas. There certainly was a lot of hate in your letter, and I don't think that it would be appropriate for an upstanding, sensitive, young woman, such as yourself, to be harboring such emotions. I am a pretty nice person. If you met me, you would probably like me. All-righty then!

Carnivorously yours,
Eric J. Bokinsky

Fifth Variety Show served up smorgasbord of entertainment

Kevin Kohler
Flyer Staff Writer

How much variety can you put in a decidedly music-oriented variety show? Quite a bit, if the show happens to be named V5.

For the fifth time in Salisbury State history, students and alumni put on their top hats and served up a smorgasbord of entertainment for all. The double shot, which showcased more than 30 students plus the SSU Jazz band and Theatre Department, gave audiences a feast for ears and eyes alike last Friday and Saturday night. From Country to Jazz, electric guitar to saxophone, Chorus Line to Aladdin, the Variety Show provided a little something for everyone.

Tony Broadbent, who produced the event, said, "I'm delirious. I do it because I want to show off the talent. But I'm just the motivator."

As the curtain opened on the warm evening, the six emcees, Javarro Edwards, Cynthia Lasner, Sean Mahoney, Lori Nichols, Shani Pritchett and J.T. Thomas, faced a stubbornly cold crowd. Edwards, who was taking the stage for the first time, said "It's a different kind of pressure (than playing football.)"

The jazz band prepped the audience audiences' ears while the opening sequence "EFX" widened eyes. Four Musicians and A Drummer kicked things off as Joyce Forsthoffer, equally comfortable singing jazz or country, performed Reba McIntyre's "Why Haven't I Heard From You."

Part of last year's show, Perfect Pitch, returned to show off more a cappella vocal harmony, starting off with "Sounds of Silence," a tongue-in-cheek selection, before satisfying on-lookers with a encore held-over from last year, "The Lion Sleeps Tonight," better known as the Aweem-Away song.

Sean Rose, followed with his original song, "Tell Me Why," inspired by the Exxon Valdez disaster. Later, in the second act, Tom Harris celebrated his Dad's birthday by singing another environmental tune, this time a traditional ballad.

A hat trick of talent danced the night away in the first act, starting with "In His Image," seven ladies from Baptist Student Ministries, who interpreted the inspirational "Cry For The Desert," using sign language. Kristine Halls choreographed her dance to Daniel Anthony's heated electric guitar. Ending the act, Shani Pritchett and William Wells got into the groove, hip-hoppin' to "Do You Wanna Get Funky," by C&C Music Factory. I especially enjoyed the sultry, smokin' sound of Bill Robinson jammin' on the saxophone. He was really cooking, and the audience showed its enthusiasm by clapping along.

Toneisha Jones, really captured the sound of Whitney Houston's "I Will Always Love You" and stayed around to give the audience two energetic popular dance hits, as well.

Alumni David Kilkeary dropped in from New York where he is performing on the comedy club circuit. His antics made us all laugh.

Performing for the first time, Joy Baynard gave a stirring, heartfelt rendition of "Silent All These Years," by her idol, Tori Amos.

Backed by the pit band, Tiffany Lowe and Jamand Mack, provided the romantic note of the evening, singing "A Whole New World," from "Aladdin." A much anticipated performance (one audience member even told the emcees between performances that he was waiting for JTH), the crowd went wild listening to the emotionally charged duet.

After her performance, Tiffany remarked, "It was exhilarating, and I had a good time doing it. It was nice, since it's my last year here."

The Theatre Department closed the evening dancing along with the most famous of Broadway tunes from A Chorus Line.

So for the fifth time it was many people, but one singular sensation...

Quilt Series Continues at SSU

MaryBeth Vanston
Flyer Staff Writer

Continuing with the celebration of Women's History Month, SSU will be co-sponsoring a series of programs honoring quilts and their makers during April. The April programs are part of a series called "Women's Quilts, Women's Voices," which opened on Friday with an exhibit at the Fulton Hall Art Gallery and features a variety of quilts made in Maryland's Lower Eastern Shore between the early nineteenth century and the present. The exhibit will be shown until April 21.

According to exhibit organizers Nancy Revelle Johnson and Laura Tuennerman-Kaplan, some of the quilts are locally famous and have been on display in museums or institutions, while others have never been seen outside the homes of their owners.

How does the world view Americans?

Monica Tettamanzi
Flyer Staff Writer

These words might sound harsh for most Americans, but what we are trying to discover here is if Fuentes was actually right or wrong in his statement. How are Americans really seen internationally? Are Americans as ethnocentric as people say?

Initially, it may be difficult for you to accept and understand how people from other countries view you. Nobody likes to be stereotyped. However, if you learn how others see you, you can better prepare yourself to help them understand you.

Here is an example. When college student David Ryan visited Borneo, he was asked "Where are you from?"

"America," he replied.

"North or South?" was the retort *.

Did Robert assume that the word America meant only North America?

Let's talk about first impressions. What do people think about North Americans the first time they visit the States? Here are perhaps some of the strongest impressions. 1- The enormous size of America usually surprises visitors. How can you drive for hours and hours, crossing natural boundaries and time zones and still be in the same country? 2- Foreigners are welcomed by the friendly nature of Americans. Personally, I was quite shocked the first time I had dinner in an American restaurant. The waitress introduced herself, asked me how I was doing and frequently kept coming by my table to check how things were going. Did she think I needed some special help? Was I doing something wrong? Why didn't she leave me alone, I wondered. A few months later I discovered that common courtesy is a norm in U.S. restaurants.

3- Why are Americans so fat? Nutrition experts tell us that Americans weigh more than most other nationalities on Earth. Regardless of current health and fitness fads, U.S.A. is getting heavier *. The number of obese people in the States is often an observation for foreign visitors.

4- Foreigners are amazed at the fast pace and punctuality of Americans. Is everybody always running? Does anyone ever take a break? In most other countries, the pace and pressure is generally slower and softer. For instance, Spanish people take an hour break every day for lunch (their main meal), and the word punctuality

I.T.V.A. to recognize excellence in programming

Jan Carroll
Editor in Chief

SSU's student chapter of the International Television Association will be hosting its first annual Video Festival Awards Ceremony on Monday, May 8 at 7p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium.

International Television Association (ITVA) is a worldwide organization of professionals, as well as students, who are interested in the television business.

The ceremony is open to all students, whether members of ITVA or not. Students may submit up to three video productions in one of these six categories: projects completed in CMAT 136; SSU-TV; Commercials & PSA's; Music Videos; Informative Videos; or Entertainment (does not fit into any of the above categories). Entries must be accompanied by a $2.00 entry fee per video.

Two awards will be given in each category, an Award of Excellence and an Award of Merit. To be eligible for an award, participants must have been a student when the project was completed, and the productions must have been made after January 1994. If the project was not completed on campus, it must have been possible to have completed on campus in order to be eligible.

Entry forms are available in Caruthers Hall room 167. Forms, tapes and the entry fee may be placed in envelopes and dropped off at the same location. The deadline to enter the awards ceremony is Friday, April 14, except for those currently enrolled in CMAT 136, which the deadline is April 20.

All tapes will be judged by members of the Salisbury community who are not affiliated with SSU's CMAT classes.

Kim Raiguel, treasurer of SSU's ITVA chapter, reminds participants to turn in tapes cued up to the slate of the entry to make it easier for the judges to locate the production to be viewed.

Raiguel encourages all students to attend the awards ceremony, which will offer screenings of the entries to the audience.

means being half an hour late.

5 - Tips and taxes are common in the U.S., but not in many other countries. In many countries, tips and taxes are already included in the cost of an item. As a result, visiting consumers become annoyed at having to always pay more than what is marked on the price tag.

6 - Teacher-student relationship is different in many foreign countries. In many countries the teacher is not only somebody who you learn from but somebody who you firmly respect and don't argue with. Some visitors might be shocked by the way students treat teachers and might consider it disrespectful. On the other hand, some foreigners enjoy the informality and the freedom of expression.

These are only some of the impressions that foreign visitors often get from the American culture. Besides these impressions, foreigners will also take home little pictures or snapshots of scenes that Americans would never think about. Here are some of the things that surprise visitors:

- endless interstate highways.
- gigantic food markets.
- the absence of protective fences in front of and between homes.

- fast food outlets.
- houses made of wood instead of brick.
- different state license plates on autos.
- huge cars.
- low gasoline prices*...

So... are Americans really the way people perceive them? Do you agree with the way foreigners see you? If you want others to understand who you really are, help them do so. We challenge you to find a way to the effective intercultural understanding. Get rid of those stereotypes!

The oldest quilt in the exhibit dates back to 1825. The 170-year-old quilt is in the Federal style and on loan from the Calvin B. Taylor Museum in Berlin. Other quilts include three stitched by African-American women, a "crazy" quilt from 1891, one from the 1920's, another quilt made during the Depression and two contemporary commemorative quilts.

The "Women's Quilts, Women's Voices" series will continue on Tuesday, April 11 with a slide presentation, "Quilts as a Key to the Past," by Professor Sylvia Bradley of the SSU History Department. The presentation will be at 7:30 p.m. in 111 Fulton Hall next to the Gallery.

On the following Tuesday, April 18, the series will continue with the showing of the prize-winning hour long film "Hearts and Hands." The film will also be in 111 Fulton at 7:30 p.m.

The series will be completed with a slide lecture on Thursday, April 20 at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium by Dr. Gladys-Marie Fry of the University of Maryland. Dr. Fry will be discussing the coded information stitched into quilts by black slaves.

"I went to high school around here and in a very short time since I was in school, what it means to be a student in Wicomico County has changed drastically."

S.T.O.P. was the idea of a small group of parents who attended a conference last summer of the Northeast Regional Center for Drug Free Schools and Community. After returning to Salisbury they organized S.T.O.P. in all four schools.

S.T.O.P. has garnered the support of SSU's Center for Conflict Resolution, which has helped the teens organize.

I've about had it with the people my age who go around propagating and perpetuating this "generation X" idea. We didn' choose this "X"-thing. So don't use it, please!

I'm not an "X". My mom didn't call me "X", beca she loves me. The only people who are going to call you are those who don't give a rat's ass about you. I'm an intelligent concerned, imaginative, loving and capable ma an "X"!!!

Is your self-esteem so low that you've already resigned yourself to being nothing? The message that has been sent to you by those who dreamed this "X" thing is, very simply, that you don't count. Disrespect at Variety Show

Last Friday night I attended my third Variety show here at SSU. Throughout the past years, I have come to expect a wide variety of talent and entertainment. This year was no exception with acts ranging from a Broadway musical excerpt to country to a jazz saxophone soloist. The show fell short however, due to the behavior of a large portion of the audience.

The show began well but certain audience members began to hurl comments at the acts and the M.C.'s loud enough for all of Holloway to hear them. Now I'm all for an excited crowd enjoying a show, but when people cross the line of disrespect, the whole performance suffers. The comedian could hardly be heard over insults and fifth grade heckling. All of this paled in comparison to what in the middle of the second act. With the show in progress, M.C.'s and spotlight in the aisle, almost half the crowd with no attempt to be inconspicuous, left the auditorium. I couldn't believe it. Not only did it disrupt the show but it was an unbelievable act of disrespect to the following acts. Obviously, many members of the audience were there for one particular act and didn't feel like watching the others. Now the show only had about 10 minutes remaining and I don't think that's too big a sacrifice on my time when I consider the hours the performers put in to rehearse.

So at next years show, let's have a great time, but please, if you're not on stage, I don't want to hear your act.

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets—money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.

Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pre-tax basis. That lowers your current taxable income, so you start saving on taxes right away. What's more, any earnings on your SRAs are also tax-deferred until you receive them as income. That can make a big difference in how painful your tax bill is every year.

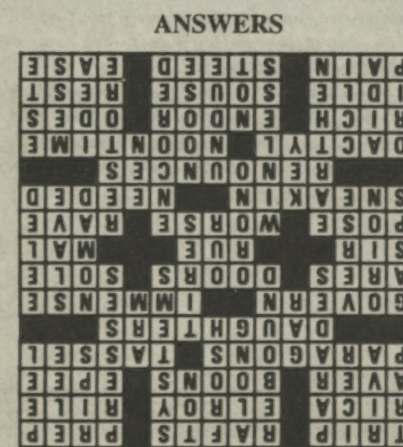

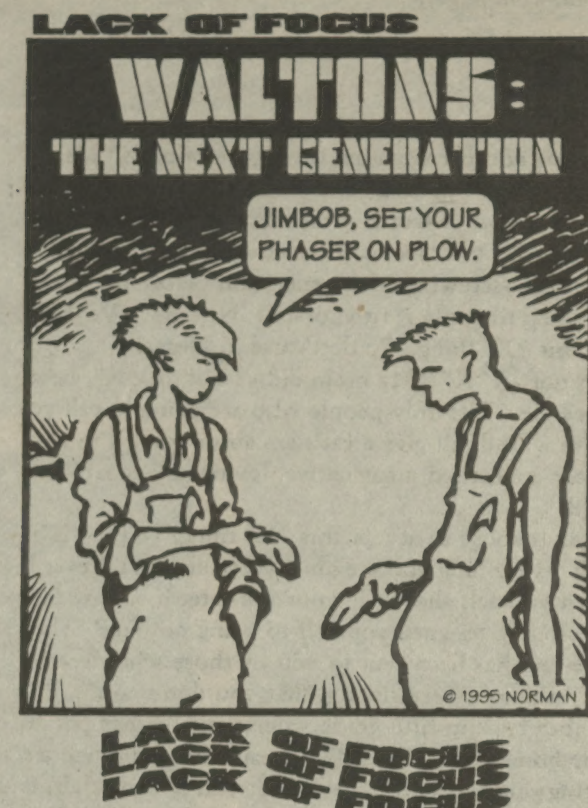

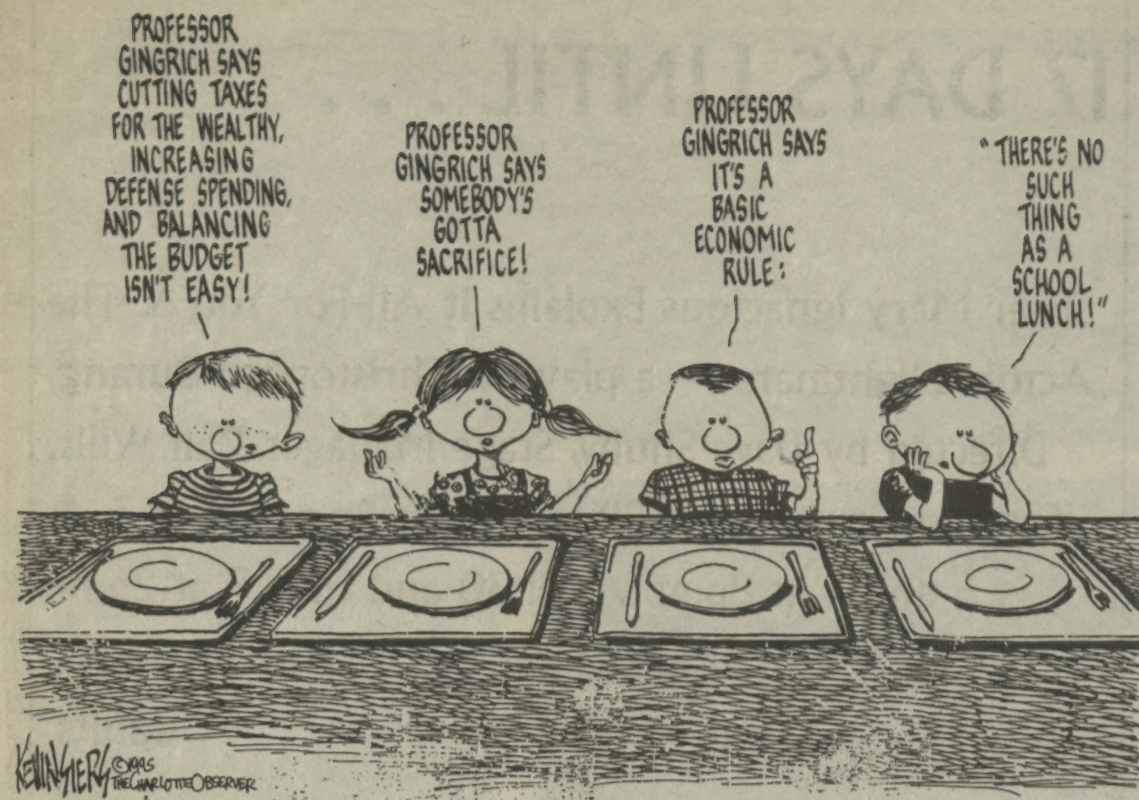

Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

As the nation's largest retirement system, we offer a wide range of allocation choices—from TIAA's traditional annuity, with its guarantees of principal and interest, to the seven diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity. What's more, our expenses are very low,* which means more of your money goes toward improving your future financial health.

To find out more, call our planning specialists at 1 800 842-2888. We'll send you a complete SRA information kit, plus a free slide-calculator that shows you how much SRAs can lower your taxes.

Men's lacrosse guns downs Bullets, 18-10

Mike Beardslee
Sports Editor

Saturday, April 22—the number-one ranked Salisbury State men's lacrosse team continued their domination of Division III lacrosse by gunning down the number-two ranked Bullets of Gettysburg, 18-10, in front of a home crowd of 1797 at Sea Gull Stadium. The win pushes the Gulls to 8-0 for the season, while Gettysburg drops to 7-1. The victory also extends the Gulls' unbeaten streak to 24, and marks the 45th straight regular-season win.

The Gulls were actually down 5-6 at the half, and for a while they looked timid and uncertain. Gettysburg took 22 shots on goal to Salisbury's 20, and the Gulls' served four minutes of penalties to one and a half for the Bullets by the end of the second period.

The Gulls got it together at the half, and came out firing in the third quarter, scoring seven unanswered goals to pull ahead, 12-6. "It was a great game," said SSU head coach Jim Berkman. "They made us stretch ourselves and dig deep. Our goalie (Rich Betcher) and the defense got us over the hump."

SSU attackman Jason Coffman was once again magnificent. He finished with eight goals and an assist, and at times he was just unstoppable. He and Sean Radebaugh (six goals, three assists), combined for 14 of SSU's 18 goals, and 18 of the Gulls' 29 points. All six of Radebaugh's goals came in the crucial third quarter.

"I like being in front and staying in front," said Coffman. "In the first half we let them play their type of ball; in the second we played our type of ball."

The Gulls never looked back after their seven-goal run. Joe Feldman snuck one in for Gettysburg with 3:30 left to go in the third, but the Gulls quickly answered with four more goals (two apiece by Radebaugh and Coffman) to make it 16-7 before the start of the fourth period. The Gulls let three more goals slip past, but scored twice more to secure the win, 18-10.

"Our depth really came into play in the second half," said Berkman. "In the third quarter we started dominating the groundball and going to the goal."

Midfielder Brendan Bellotte said, "In the lockerroom coach told us the defense played 24 of 30 minutes in the first half; you can't win games that way. In the third, the offense was in tune; we started getting faceoffs and we started holding onto the ball and putting it in the net."

Salisbury finished with a 53-41 shots-on-goal advantage, and scooped up 64 ground balls to Gettysburg's 40. Gettysburg held an 18-14 edge in faceoffs and scored on two extra-man opportunities while the Gulls only converted once.

SSU goalie Rich Betcher was heroic in the crease, collecting 22 saves while the Bullet's Jake Kovalcik made 13.

The win practically assures the Gulls of homefield advantage for the NCAA Championship tournament, but Jason Coffman says the players are trying not to think too far ahead. "It's sort of in the back of our minds, but we have to stay focused for the playoffs."

Senior Dan Mergott furthers the Gulls efforts at an undefeated season.

Baseball and softball teams win CAC crowns

The men's baseball team and women's softball team both captured Capital Athletic Conference titles in their respective tournaments this weekend. The baseball team beat Catholic University, 10-5 in the semifinal on Saturday, then came from behind to defeat York College, 4-2 later in the day.

The women's softball team downed Catholic in the semifinals as well, 7-2, before toppling host Mary Washington, 10-5, to claim the crown. The win boosted the team's record to 17-12, and they will look to improve their regular season record with a home game on Wednesday against Wilmington at 2:00.

Women's rugby team loses, 34-0

Elizabeth Pagel
Flyer Staff Writer

Salisbury State University's women's rugby team suffered a defeat this Saturday, April 8, facing the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences.

Hot sunshine kept the field dry and dusty, and SSU kicked to their opponents to start the game. Five minutes into the first half, USUHS took off downfield, eluding Kelly Kerrlaut's attempted tackle and scoring the first try, followed by a conversion.

USUHS had strong backs that kept the ball moving and out of SSU hands. They had their second successful try twelve minutes into the game and were leading 12-0.

Thumper Sparza was all over the field for the Gulls, and helped SSU begin to put up some tough opposition against another push by USUHS for a try. The defense was strong, but USUHS managed to break away and cross the goal line again, making it 17-0 at the half.

The skilled offense of USUHS pushed their lead in the second half to 34-0 as the disappointed Sea Gulls were shut out.

Coach Kenny Mauck regretted the loss, but feels the women have played 100% better than last season.

"Even the coach of USUHS commented on how much

Tony McCray dashes away from the pack

Elizabeth Pagel
Flyer Staff Writer

"I take whatever sport I am in very seriously," said SSU sprinter Tony McCray. "I like the competition."

McCray came to SSU in 1990 to play football, having just finished his training as an alternate for the U.S. Olympic bobsled team. He left the football team eventually for personal reasons, and has dedicated his efforts to performing at an outstanding level on the track and field.

McCray has been to nationals twice, once as an individual qualifier in the 100 meter dash and as a member of the 4x100 relay in 1993, and as the anchor of the 1994 4x100 relay team.

"I'm very focused this year," said McCray. "I'm looking to achieve All-American status."

In addition to qualifying for the 100m dash, McCray plans to long jump 24'1/2", which would give him the school record and meet the qualifying standard for nationals.

He not only expects high things from himself, but has high hopes for the 4x100m relay.

"We are looking to go under 40 seconds in the relay," said McCray. "We have the talent to do it, and we are still in the early stages of our training."

Coach Jerry Thomas feels that McCray has been a real asset to the team.

"Tony has helped us get the team to where it is today. He was the first sprinter to qualify for nationals since 1975. He has really brought a new dimension to the team," said Thomas. "His performances have attracted other top quality runners."

"I like the competition; the better the competition, the more motivated I am," said McCray.

McCray will get a chance to put his competitiveness to the test when the men run for the CAC championship on Tuesday, April 18.

Kim Gillis 8-0 to start tennis season

Jeff Brameyer
Flyer Staff Writer

When freshman Kim Gillis first came to SSU she was nervous about what to expect from college athletics. Now halfway into the tennis season Gillis has obviously made that adjustment by winning all of her eight matches at number three singles for the Salisbury State women's tennis team.

Gillis started playing tennis when her older sister needed a partner to try out for the middle school team. When she reached middle school herself, Gillis took lessons and hasn't turned back since.

Gillis says one of her biggest fears was having to learn to play doubles for the first time in her life. "It was a big adjustment, playing both (singles and doubles) together," Gillis said. She has adjusted to this as well, however; in fact, Gillis is now playing number one doubles with April Quigley, SSU's number one singles player.

According to Gillis, first year coach John Browning has been a big help during her first year. "He really knew what to focus in on, and taught me what I needed to know [about playing doubles] said Gillis.

Another big help for Gillis has been the overwhelming support from the other players, both women and men. "The teams are very supportive," said Gillis, "Even when the men's team doesn't have a match they are out there to support you and cheer you on."

Intramural basketball special!

The Intramural basketball season concluded Sunday, April 2nd with the crowning of four champions. It was an exciting night as over 100 people came to Maggs to watch the heated action.

The first title decided was the first-ever coed league championship, featuring Why Not? and Who Cares. The first half was back and forth with Fred Bowden scoring 11 of his game-high 15 points for Why Not? But Who Cares held the halftime lead, 21-22, and never looked back. After a five minute drought by both teams in the second half, Who Cares, led by Christine Politz (12pts) and Brad Fryman (11pts), pulled away to win, 40-28.

The second championship matched 6-Clan against the Nuggets for the highly skilled championship. 6-Clan maintained control throughout the game but were never able to put away the Nuggets. The Nuggets were down by six late in the first half, but were able to hit two threes, one by Kevin Henson (16pts), to tie the score at 23. Then Delano Brown was fouled on a three-point shot with no time left. His foul shots gave 6-Clan a two-point halftime lead. The second half became a battle between Eric Jones (26pts) and the Nuggets' George (Big Bill) Lancaster (24pts). Lancaster won the second half battle, 20-17, but Jones' teammates gave 6-Clan the edge.

It was tight right down to the wire. Down by three with ten seconds left, the Nuggets had an opportunity to tie, but a bad pass left 6-Clan the winner, 56-53.

The third matchup of the night was for the women's championship, featuring S&H versus the Over the Hill Gang. Many of the S&H women had played in the coed championship and were looking for another shirt. However, the Over the Hill Gang proved to be too strong for S&H. At the half, the score was 18-18, with four players scoring 6 points apiece. In the second half, Over the Hill Gang, which had no subs, soared ahead, led by Sarah Jones who put up 11 of her game-high 17 points. Jones combined with Jenny Shelley to score 18 of the team's 29 second-half points. The final score was 47-27.

In the final game of the night, the Hoosiers had to face the Soccer Players for the skilled championship. Both teams had come off impressive semifinal wins earlier in the evening. After the first few minutes of a defensive struggle, The Soccer Players dashed to a 14-point run led by Matt Tirschman (20pts) to take the halftime lead, 23-11. The Soccer Players pushed their lead to 17 with six minutes left to go to make it 46-29, but The Hoosiers were not to be discarded so easily. Led by Robert Miller, who put up 18 of his 23 points in the second half, included four three pointers, the Hoosiers quickly closed the lead to two, 46-44. The Hoosiers kept the pressure on and with 17 seconds left, were down 51-49. They had just forced a turnover when literally the lights went out. After a ten-minute delay, the Hoosiers rimmed out on a final shot, and a Soccer Player rebounded and was fouled. The Soccer Players won 52-49.

Congratulations to all winners and thanks to all who participated, we hope to see you next year!

GULL TAKES... Baseball

The Gulls gained wins number 11 and 12, defeating York college in both sides of a doubleheader on April 2. In the opener, pitcher Brian Holloman posted his second shut-out of the season in a 1-0 win for the Gulls. Matt Felice scored on Bill Ewe's RBI groundout in the second inning for the game's only run. The SSU defense was outstanding, turning several key doubleplays to preserve the victory.

On April 4, the Gulls nipped Catholic University, 6-5. The win improved the Gulls record to 13-7 overall and 8-2 in the Capital Athletic Conference. It also netted them the regular-season CAC crown and homefield advantage in the CAC tournament. In the top of the sixth, Ted Godfrey reached first on a single and stole second. He was then advanced to third and scored the winning run on a perfect squeeze bunt by Mike Amato. Amato was 5-for-5 on the day with a double, while Ed Stephan, Cable Miller, and Dave Westervelt also had extra-base hits. Catcher Bill Ewe slammed his third homerun of the season in the second inning with a runner on base. Pitcher Brian McClellan improved his record to 5-0 in relief of starter Jeff Wilson.

Tuesday's victory over Catholic was made even bigger because it gave head coach Deane Deshon his 500th career win. Deshon is 500-409-12 in his 32 years at SSU.

Softball

The SSU softball team started off the week by losing to Cortland (N.Y.) in a quarterfinal match of the Montclair State 12-team tournament. Lauren Spears was the losing pitcher for the Gulls in the 8-0 loss.

The team was able to bounce back by sweeping a doubleheader against Washington College on April 3. The Gulls won the first game, 12-8 as pitcher Tracy Layfield earned the complete-game victory. She was aided by a six-run fourth inning that saw Danielle Urban drill a bases loaded triple. Nicole Urban was 3-for-4 on the day. Kristin Heath, Kara Burman, and Jen Bowman were all 2-for-4 with two RBI's each. The Gulls won the second game in much the same fashion, scoring six runs in the fourth inning of the 11-1 decision. Winning pitcher Lauren Spears helped herself by going 2-for-3 and knocking in two RBI's. Jen Bowman accounted for three runs by nailing a bases-loaded double.

On April 6, the Gulls split a doubleheader with York College, losing the first game 6-2 and winning the second, 8-4. The loss prevented the Gulls from hosting the CAC tournament. Angela Mangone was the winning pitcher as the Gulls moved to 15-12 on the year.

Lacrosse

The Gulls earned their 44th consecutive regular-season victory by defeating Ohio Wesleyan, 16-8 on April 1. The number-one ranked Gulls got four goals apiece from Jake Bergey, Paul Smith, and Jason Coffman. The number-four ranked Bishops were the best team the Gulls have faced all season. They kept the Gulls in check for most of the first half, and went into halftime down by only two. In the second half the Gulls opened up with six unanswered goals to put the game away.

Tennis

The women's tennis team prepared for the CAC tournament this week by crushing both UMES and Christopher Newport. The wins were the 16th and 17th victories for the Lady Gulls out of their last twenty matches. The men's team also posted a victory over UMES, winning 7-0.

Track

Both the men's and women's track teams placed in the top five of the 17-team Captain's Classic. The women finished fourth behind Stacie Gado's first place javelin throw. The throw also qualified her for the NCAA championships. The men took third place behind a strong performance by Tony Hill. Hill placed first in the long jump and second in the triple jump.

Gillis

Now with the beginning jitters behind her, Gillis is looking to improve her game and help the team boost their 7-1 record.

According to Gillis the strength of her game is in wearing down an opponent. "Basically I'm consistent," she said. "I'm not really a hard hitter but I'm consistent to get the ball back enough into play where hopefully the other person will make the mistake."

Gillis says she wants to elevate her singles game to, "Another level," and to do so she says she has to work on her serve and improve on her power. She sees herself hopefully raising that level every year, but right now she wants to concentrate on her freshman year and not look too far into the future.

So far this season Gillis has been a big part of the success of the women's tennis team at SSU. Making the adjustment to college athletics from the high school level is not an easy thing to do and through her hard work Gillis has been able to gain positive results.

our ladies have improved," said Mauck. "Our club is only two years old, while USUHS has players with six years of experience. Despite all that, they are really beginning to click as a unit."

"This team really means a lot to us," said Katie Lowe, currently on injured reserve. "We worked hard to get where we are and know how to work together."

Most of the team is new to the sport, but they are eager learners.

"Right now I am working on the basics with them, helping them learn the fundamentals. Later, when they all have playing experience, we'll work on the skills, like trick plays," said Mauck.

SSU faces York College in their next game.

world. The assault at the subway system and the assassination of the police chief of the Armed Forces made it clear to many Japanese that even they are not safe from crime.

A War That Went South

As many as 400 Hutus were massacred in Northeast Brundi on the fourth of April by the Tutsi-dominated government. Brundi, which has roughly the same ethnic composition as its war-torn neighbor to the north, Rawanda, has been cited by many UN officials as a potential site for a civil war.

To date, the Tutsis, who represent only 15% of the total population in Brundi, have managed to keep things under control. Nonetheless, the Hutus' insurrections in Brundi are gaining more and more power, especially because many of the Hutus have managed to purchase weapons from Rawandian Hutus who eluded the civil war that took place there last year. If things continue heading in the same direction, the ethnic conflict that plagued Rawanda last year and resulted in the death of more than half a million people will probably spill southward.

An Act Of Decency

Congress is debating over the passage of the Communication Decency Act which is more commonly known as the Exon Bill. The act would make the advertisement of pornographic pictures and the installment of dirty-chats services punishable by a $100,000 fine and two years in jail. Moreover, the act would give the federal government the power to surf the Web in order to censor obscene material and to prevent any illegal conspiracy.

The Web, a complex electronic superhighway that allows as many as 30 million computer users communicate with one another has increasingly become home for numerous distributors of pornographic material.

Many companies offer private dirty-chats forums that allow network users to communicate with computer talk-girls. Many members in congress expressed a concern over the fact that children can freely surf the Net and that criminals can communicate with one another using the Web.

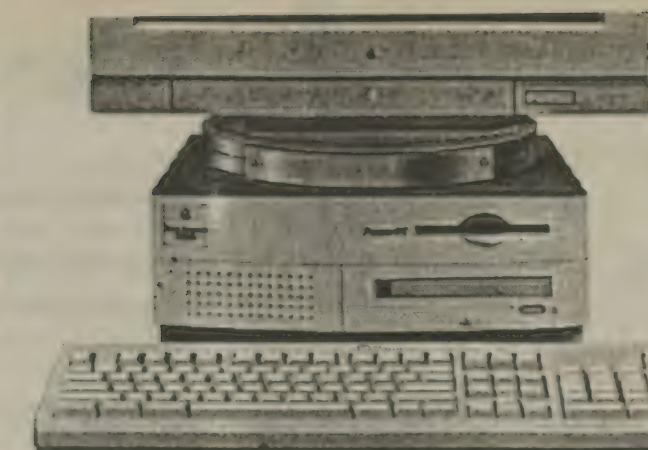

D.C.'s Day In Court

Recently many departments in Washington D.C. found themselves in court facing various accusations both from within and from outside their organizations. D.C.'s Department of Correction was accused of institutionalizing a policy of harassment within the department. Many women who worked in the department said that their male colleagues sexually harassed them and that advancement within the department was based on sexual favors.

The D.C. housing office was accused of running a $152,000 deficit without permission in order to pay three employees. The three were accused of receiving bribes and were suspended without pay by the federal government in order to protect the public's interest. The department, however, kept paying the three while attributing the deficit to overspending on subsidies to the poor.

At the same time that all these various departments have been defending their reputation, D.C.'s Mayor Marion Barry has been on trial for sexual harassment and for using the police to intimidate his victims from taking him to court. Barry, who was already convicted of using illicit drugs, found himself in court again at a time when his city is crumbling apart.

CRIME BEAT

Submitted by Jim Phillips, Director of Public Safety

3/30 Theft - Four CD's were reported stolen from a vendor in the hallway of the University Center. A suspect was identified through a photo line-up conducted by University Police. Follow-up investigation revealed that another person was involved and all four CD's were recovered. Both suspects are students and administrative hearing is pending.

3/31 Recovered Stolen Automobile - A car that had been reported stolen on 3/29 from Edgewood, MD was found parked in the Chesapeake Lot. It is possible that the three suspects who were arrested for stealing the students car from the Chesapeake Lot on 3/30/95 used the stolen car to drive to campus from the Baltimore Area. The investigation is continuing.

3/31 Hit and Run - A employee reported that a van was damaged by an unknown vehicle while parked in the Caruthers Lot. The back end of the van is damaged.

4/2 Vandalism - A student reported that a car was damaged while parked in the Administrative services lot. A door was possibly opened by someone in a parked car, hitting the other car.

4/2 Theft - A student reported the theft of a bike that was locked in a rack at the front of the library. The cable lock had apparently been cut.

4/1 Vandalism - A faucet handle to a sink on the first floor of Caruthers Hall was broken.

4/3 Act of Intolerance - An anti-gay message was written on a bulletin board in Dogwood Village.

4/4 Theft - A student reported the theft of a bookbag and contents from the hallway outside of the training room in Maggs Gym.

4/6 Hit and Run - A student reported that a car was damaged by another car while parked in the Chesapeake lot. The mirror was struck which caused the drivers side window to break.

4/6 Tampering with a Vehicle - A resident of St. Martin Hall reported that the hood latch of a vehicle was tampered with while parked in the Chesapeake lot.

4/6 Indecent Exposure - Two joggers reported seeing a nude man near the trees at the corner of Dogwood Drive and Camden Avenue. The area was searched but a suspect could not be located.
